KINDNESS KINGDOM IS DUBBED THE GREATEST GAME IN ALL THE LAND

*Marvelously Well-Mannered's "Kindness Kingdom" Game Wins
2013 National Parenting Center, Creative Child,
Mr. Dad & Great Dad Awards!*

Arlington, VA (September 30, 2013) – Hear ye, hear ye, her graciousness, Queen Grace is proud to announce to all the land, far and wide, hither and yon, pip and squeak, please and thank you, pinkies down, elbows in and off the table, etcetera and so forth, ahem, ahem, that her most marvelously well-mannered game, “Kindness Kingdom” has been bestowed with 2013 National Parenting Center, Creative Child and Mr. Dad and Great Dad Seals of Approval Awards. Her majesty is most grateful to the kindnesses received and does, will and shall continue to spread her message of good etiquette and manners throughout the kingdom of kids and, most certainly at her royal tea parties, to which all are invited to attend.

Here’s why the National Parenting Center judges awarded the Seal of Approval to Marvelously Well-Mannered, LLC:

Kindness Kingdom

Recommended Age: 5 and Up

Price: $35.00

“Of all the products tested this summer the surprise hit had to be Kindness

Kingdom that slipped in under the radar and grabbed testers’ attention. The game is centered around princesses, knights and a queen, always a good place to start.

What happens as the game unfolds and pieces move around the board is a lesson in manners and etiquette. The game cards and questions use different categories and trivia to teach good manners, life-lessons such as kindness and other good behavior and protocol. The package is delightful, it's simple, colorful scene is very appealing and attractive. The game is very easy to learn and features charms that players collect for their bracelets. As you might imagine this is a game that is geared to little girls. The best benefit of this game comes afterwards when seated at the dinner table when children want to show off what they have learned.”

“Kindness Kingdom” also won the Creative Child 2013 Game Of The Year Award.

Commented one reviewer:

“What a help for everyday life! Teaching manners, and how to treat friends is priceless.” And another judge observed, “Very creative and educational for kids.”

When the dads at Mr. Dad and Great Dad and their kids got ahold of Kindness Kingdom, they were bowled over by how fun and educational the game was. Here's a portion of their review:

“Many dads will take a look at the fairies, tea parties, charm bracelets, princesses, and flowers and run away screaming. But that would be a mistake. In fact, I’d argue that this game is an absolute must-have for dads of daughter. The insights you’ll get into what makes your little girl tick are well worth the purchase price. And the rewards you’ll get from showing her you’re really interested in her world are priceless... (For example, What’s a fancy word for tea sandwiches? Should you extend your hand first to shake hands with someone in a wheelchair? How long after you receive a gift should you have to write a thank-you note?)...”

The awards reinforce the glowing reviews offered by mom bloggers across the country, universally raving about how interesting and educational the game was and how much they appreciate the opportunity to teach their children manners through a truly fun game.
